Case File: Inspector Whiskers

Detectives
Notice
Everything!

Read carefully. The smallest detail can solve the case.

Inspector Whiskers is not a normal detective. Inspector Whiskers is a cat! He wears a tiny hat and always carries a small magnifying glass. Every morning he drinks warm milk, reads the newspaper, and waits for a new case.

Today there is a very big problem at the City Museum. The famous golden fish is gone! The director is worried, because tomorrow the museum has a special visitor — the Queen. “Please, Inspector,” she says, “you must find it before nine o’clock!”

Inspector Whiskers looks around the room and finds three clues. First, the glass box is empty, but the lock is not broken. So the thief has a key. Second, there are small marks on the floor. They are not shoes — they are paws! Third, near the open window he finds one little blue button.

There are three suspects. Mr Green, the night guard, has a key to every room. Miss Rose, the cleaner, wears a blue coat, but all her buttons are there. And Coco, the museum cat, has soft paws and loves shiny things.

Inspector Whiskers follows the paw prints to the kitchen. Behind the fridge, he finds Coco with the golden fish! “Aha!” he says. But then he stops. “Wait — a cat cannot open a lock with a key.”

He looks again at the blue button and smiles. He walks to Mr Green and points at his coat. One button is missing! “You opened the box with your key,” says Inspector Whiskers, “and you gave the fish to Coco to hide it. The real thief is you!” The Queen arrives at nine o’clock, and the golden fish is safe again.
